The county chairman appoints the secretary.

A committee on resolutions was authorized and the following were named: P. A. T. Bower, James B. Devine, M. G. Bish, J. M. McClellan and Vincent Redding.

Candidates being present were called upon for speeches. Hon. A. R. Brodbeck, the Democratic candidate for Congress, first spoke and among other things said:

County Committee:

I esteem it a great privilege indeed to meet with you upon this occasion when you effect your organization preparatory of going into an important quadrennial Presidential campaign.

I very highly appreciate the courtesy to address you briefly at this time, and as your nominee for Representative in Congress, I avail myself of this opportunity to tell you how much I appreciate what you have done for me heretofore and during the recent primary election and beg to thank you and all who have assisted in achieving my nomination.

The primary election while a strenuous one, was clean and aggressive. I am pleased to note the general submission to the will of the majority and the evident unity and harmony that exists among the Democrats throughout the Congressional District.

Your presence here to-day in such large numbers and the spirit that pervades this meeting is indicative of a material, personal interest you manifest in the campaign about to open before the people of the United States.

It is eminently fitting and very proper and important that you should feel a keen interest and responsibility.

You as county committeemen are the representatives of the Democrats of your respective voting precincts in your townships, and boroughs. A great deal depends upon your wise, judicious administration of the trust committed to you as to the support your party receives from your district or precinct.

The Democratic party under the Wilson Administration stands for more than it ever did within its history.

The eyes of the world are focused upon the voters of the United States in this presidential contest. The result will demonstrate to our foreign friends and foes whether we are Americans true to our country by approving and commending the great and masterful diplomatic achievements of President Wilson by saving us from intervention and entanglement of war or whether we prefer to play small, petty politics, regardless of the rights and protection of the people and the honor of our country.

I confidently believe the people of the United States will rise equal to the occasion and opportunity and not only re-elect Woodrow Wilson, but will back him up with a loyal and sustaining Democratic Congress to bring to a successful consummation pending and contemplated legislation necessary for a Democratic Congress and Administration to enact.

There is a unity of purpose in the interest of the party such as certainly has not existed for years. There being still more room under the test of the Democratic party for all who care to come under its covering, we should become active and aggressive and demonstrate not only to the residents of our county, but to the State, yea the nation, that the people of Adams county believe in President Wilson; that they believe in Democracy; that they believe in true citizenship for these United States and that they believe in real Americanism such as is exemplified and typified in President Wilson.

Let the Democratic majority be such as has never been known in the history of the districts which we represent.

Thos. J. Brereton of Chambersburg, the Democratic candidate for the State Senate, next spoke and called attention to the fact that the Republican machine would make strenuous efforts to control the State.

Not only has the Democratic party under the present administration achieved world wide notice for superior legislation affecting and regulating domestic affairs and of world wide significance, but the Democratic administration under the wise guiding hand of its great President has met and faced the most trying and perplexing international problems, unequalled in the history of the world, and with unflinching bravery and almost superhuman foresight, he has accomplished diplomatic supremacy and achievements unsurpassed in the annals of history.

The Eastern Hemisphere and the Orient are well nigh war-mad, and to-day there is only one country from which radiate sunbeams of help and hope for peace and that is our own God-given country, the United States of America.

The transition of the distinction of being the youngest nation in the whole constellation of nations of the world, now to be recognized as the foremost important and hopeful one in the present world-crisis is a "World-Wonder," yet it defines our position to-day and the world recognizes the United States as such.

It, therefore, behooves us as loyal American citizens to rise in our manhood and patriotism to defend the command that which advanced and preserved the power and influence of our nation to the conspicuous position we now occupy.

The approaching presidential contest is one that challenges the patriotic valor of men. The spirit of empty, partisan, political selfishness, narrowness and greediness must be eliminated and be supplanted by an unselfish, dignified statesmanship of the broadest and highest intelligent character and couched in the spirit of righteousness.

By virtue of the Democratic party, your party, my party, being in power, you recognize the policy of the administration is on trial, if therefore, behooves us to proclaim through the ballot box our loyalty and allegiance to the virtues of the principle of our party and the policy of the hand of authority that safely guided the destiny of our country thus far.

But, my fellow Democrats, the paramount issues of the campaign confronting us are broader and more significant than mere party or political lines. The issue is "America," the platform, "Peace and Prosperity." The goal, "Universal Peace."

The type of standard bearer requisite that is a personification of the issue, is he who by divine guidance and his own efforts has guided the destinies of our nation, he who held in check the wrath of foreign powers, he who saved the flower of manhood of the young men of our country from the horrors and bloodshed of battle; he who to-day is the most dominant factor for the restoration of world peace; our own honored and beloved and world respected foremost American of America, the Hon. Woodrow Wilson.

With Woodrow Wilson as our standard bearer, upon a platform born into existence by virtue of his superior statesmanship, his masterful ability and foresight, his indomitable will and courage to exercise it, his profound regard for an superhuman determination to execute authority for the betterment of humanity, for the honor of his country and the rights of its citizens, challenges the loyalty, bravery and patriotism of all true American citizens for their vote of commendation for past heroism, and a renewed confidence for four years more of continuance of unselfish, self-sacrificing devotion for humanity and country.

The eyes of the world are focused upon the voters of the United States in this presidential contest. The result will demonstrate to our foreign friends and foes whether we are Americans true to our country by approving and commending the great and masterful diplomatic achievements of President Wilson by saving us from intervention and entanglement of war or whether we prefer to play small, petty politics, regardless of the rights and protection of the people and the honor of our country.

JUNE ARGUMENT COURT

TWO DIVORCES WERE STARTED ON GROUND OF DESERTION.

W. M. R. R. Co. Filed Bill in Equity
Against J. M. Hood Estate for Three Pieces of Adams Co. Land.

Presiden Judge Donald P. McPherson and Associate Judges W. Howard Dicks and E. P. Miller of Gettysburg presided at the June Argument court on Monday, at which much current business was disposed of.

Two divorces were instituted as follows:

Irene Mathews vs. John A. Mathews, libel in divorce was filed alleging desertion and subpoena was awarded returnable to August court.

Anna Alberta Baker vs. Francis Aloysius Baker, libel in divorce was filed alleging desertion and subpoena was awarded returnable to August court.

The Western Maryland Railway Co. filed a bill in equity against the estate of J. M. Hood, a former president of the company in which it was alleged that while he was president he had bought for the company three tracts of land in Adams county, one of 1.4 perches and another of 4 acres in Hamiltonban township and 85 acres in Liberty township, and the prayer of the bill is for a conveyance of the tracts to the company.

John N. Miller of Gettysburg was brought into court on a habeas corpus, and his custody by Sheriff Hartman was explained. The court at the April sessions had suspended sentence because it was thought he could obtain work elsewhere which he agreed to do. Because he had not gone and by reason of suspicions aroused he had been taken into custody. The court expressed a willingness to further suspend sentence provided the defendant left town in twenty-four hours for work elsewhere. If he would be found here after such time he would be sentenced on charge to which he pleaded guilty at April court.

Of the seven accounts advertised for presentation, all but one were confirmed as follows:

Philadelphia Record.

The average man has less than an hour to devote to newspaper reading on weekdays. The daily issue of "The Philadelphia Record" therefore gives him the news in concise and attractive form, so arranged that he can grasp the essentials of the day's history of the world without a moment's loss of time and find any particular item under its appropriate classification, just where he is accustomed to look for it. Sunday, however, is a day of leisure. The Sunday newspaper reader has time for mental recreation, and demands it. The Sunday issue of "The Philadelphia Record" gives it to him, copiously, and yet with the discrimination that marks the difference between first-class and indifferent Sunday reading.

"The Sunday Record" has just added to its already abundant informative and entertaining features a new eight-page story section which is bound to appeal strongly to popular interest. This section, devoted wholly to the presentation of high-grade fiction, contains serials and short stories by writers of established reputation whose works are in great demand when published in book form. Their contributions to the story section of "The Sunday Record" are a valuable addition to the current fiction of the day, and are certain to be appreciated in every home to which that newspaper will carry them.

Good fiction appeals to the whole family—and there are scores of other features in "The Sunday Record" that help to account for its eager reception in cultivated homes. Its departments devoted to sports, fashions, domestic science, society, music and the drama, invention, art, the school and the nursery, set the standard in their respective fields. Its varied appeal to the serious and the humorous side of his interest young and old of both sexes. The addition of its new story section makes "The Philadelphia Record" a complete Sunday paper.

LINCOLN HIGHWAY BUSINESS

ESTIMATE OF TRAVEL OVER HIGHWAY DURING SEASON.

Millions of Money Will be Distributed Along the Highway by the Traveling Public.

These are touring days—the indications are openly evidenced in every community. Automobiles of all descriptions, bearing strange state license tags and loaded with more or less luggage, mud-spattered and beginning to look travel-stained, are the objects of much local curiosity at each stop. Some of these cars are from the next state and some are from the extreme sections of the country.

The progress of these tourists was reported on the main Highways when the first break in the weather of early Spring made the roads passable for country driving. They have headed in all directions although the great, through, connecting roads like the Lincoln Highway are bearing the major portion of the travel.

The volume of this tourist traffic seems certain to reach gigantic proportions in 1916. There are reasons in abundance for its phenomenal growth, chief among them the ban put upon motoring abroad by the war, bettered road conditions resulting from the interest taken in the development of the Lincoln, Dixie and other main Highways, a patriotic desire to see and know the country credited to a great degree to the same cause, a general prosperity that will permit the financing of more extended journeying of this character, and improvements resulting in the more staple reliability of the moderate priced automobile.

This great movement of intercommunication and travel within the borders of the United States is one of the broadest significance in every way. It makes one of its greatest appeals in a popular sense through the vast and even distribution of money for which it is responsible. A comprehensive idea of what this means to the whole country can be determined by considering the dollars and cents put in circulation along the route of the Lincoln Highway which offers the best standard of comparison because some definite idea of the huge traffic it carries is known.

Various estimates of from five to twenty-five thousand tourists were made as having used that great thoroughfare for long distance traveling in 1915. It is safe to say that at least ten thousand will use it during the present season, their number divided as follows:

East Ohio ..... 5,000 cars
Ohio to Missouri River ..... 3,000 cars
West of Missouri River but not including California ..... 2,000 cars
5,000 cars east of Ohio would cover out and back, approximately 6,000 miles each, or 30,000,000 miles.
3,000 cars between Ohio and the Missouri River will cover, out and back, approximately 4,000 miles each or 12,000,000 miles.
2,000 cars between the Missouri River and the coast will cover, out and back, approximately 2,000 miles each or 20,000,000 miles.
This will give the total car mileage of 40,000,000 miles. And this figure does not include the many side trips and touring done in California, Colorado or to the various national parks and other points of interest off the route of the Lincoln Highway.
Now these 10,000 cars will travel on the average, ten miles to the gallon of gasoline, using thus 4,000,000 gallons; they will travel 200 miles to each gallon of lubricating oil, consuming 20,000 gallons. They will wear out a set of tires to each 5,000 miles, therefore they will need 9,200 sets of tires. These necessities will mean sales along the Lincoln Highway as follows:

4,000,000 gals. gasoline @ $0.25 ..... $1,150,000
200,000 gals. oil @ $0.60 ..... 138,000
9,200 sets of tires @ $125 ..... 1,150,000

Total (on cars) ..... $2,300,000
It is seen that the automobile and accessory folk along the Lincoln Highway are going to do a business of $2,300,000 as a result of this travel. But this is not all; this money in fact, all of the money spent by these tourists along the way will eventually find its way into diversified channels into the pockets and tills of every merchant and shop-keeper. The tourist traffic will benefit every man, woman and child in each community.

To the sum already mentioned, the expenditures for accommodations must be added.

Figuring the average time on the road as follows:
Eastern tourists ..... 35 days
Central tourists ..... 30 days
Western tourists ..... 25 days
And the number of touring days and overnight stops.

Eastern tourists ..... 1,750,000
Central tourists ..... 900,000
Western tourists ..... 500,000

Touring days ..... 315,000
Night stops ..... 215,000

Total ..... 530,000
$1.00 per night stop @ $2.75 ..... $1,462,500
$1.00 per lunch stop @ $0.25 ..... 132,500

Grand total ..... $1,595,000

Clears and incidentals @ $1.00 for each individual per day ..... $1,595,000
The average passenger load to each automobile is 4 persons, therefore 4 times $1,595,000 or $6,380,000 added to $2,300,000 gives $8,680,000 as the total for accommodations and meals en route.

Therefore, in round figures, the Lincoln Highway alone is going to put the substantial sum of $8,680,000 in circulation along its course in this one season. And it is apparent that these figures are ultra-conservative. They are even more wonderful when it is considered that only three years ago, probably not more than 50 automobiles made the transcontinental trip. Such a development is in itself a powerful stimulus to the good roads cause.

Prohibition in Russia Successful.

After a year and a half of prohibition Russia may be said to have successfully abolished the liquor traffic. The sale of intoxicants since Emperor Nicholas put his signature to the ukase forbidding the traffic at the very outset of the war has fallen from nearly a billion rubles ($500,000,000) yearly to approximately 4 per cent. of that sum. This 4 per cent. largely consists of the sale of liquors for medicinal purposes, although in it is included also a limited traffic in wines for which there is a restricted permission in certain parts of the empire.

Vodka, formerly the most easily obtainable commodity in Russia, has become as rare as whisky in the most strictly prohibition community in the United States. Wines are still to be had, surreptitiously for the most part, but also in some cases and under prescribed conditions, with the knowledge of the authorities, but at prices which limit their sale to people of wealth or wealthy extravagance. It is possible, in Petrograd or Moscow, for instance, where the ban, even on wines, is strict, to purchase wines in certain hotels, but they may be served only in private dining rooms, and the privileges enjoyed by these institutions are frequently interrupted by the police for some infraction of the restrictive rules.

One of the most noticeable results of the almost complete suppression of vodka naturally is the disappearance from the streets and other public places of intoxicated persons. They have become so rare as to be more or less a novelty. This state of affairs offers a remarkable contrast to the ante-bellum condition when drunkenness among the lower classes of society presented a most serious problem. It is a well-established fact that each one of the 60-odd holidays, irrespective of Sundays when business houses and factories close their doors, used to mean a crippling of business activity on the following day, and often for two succeeding days, because of the fetes which attended the holiday celebrations. It is said that the saving to the workmen in this respect alone runs into prodigious figures. In one factory in the Tula government, employing 1000 men, there were 600 lost working days in three months during 1914. For the same months in 1915 these were reduced to 49.

The earning capacity of the people appears to have outstripped the advance in the cost of living, with the result that savings deposits have mounted up to an almost unbelievable extent, the peasant is living better than he ever did before and he is acquiring a self-respect which he never possessed in the old days of vodka domination.

Among the benefits observed by an independent investigator, A. I. Farev, who recently traveled through a number of the central governments are: A noteworthy falling off in the number of domestic rows; a light and more hopeful spirit among the people; a decrease in arrears of taxes; fields better tilled and a growing demand for agricultural machinery; a decrease in alcoholics in the charity hospitals and other institutions; and a decrease in crimes and in the number of beggars. According to this investigation, the peasant, instead of feeling that he has suffered an injury by the abolition of vodka, is grateful for having had a temptation removed which he knew he himself was powerless to resist. The Emperor is reverently referred to as "Nicholas the Temperate."

A peasant is quoted as saying: "We have now one common enemy—the Germans; formerly every man was his own enemy." A director of a glass factory in Moscow said that 50 years more of drunkenness would have lost to the Russian people all capacity for resistance and the nation would have fallen an easy prey to Germany.

A typical example of the reconstruction in progress is to be found among the Ostyaks, a large population in eastern Siberia, in the Governments of Tomsk and Tobolsk, whose chief industry is trapping and fishing. Formerly they fell easy prey to traders who plied them with vodka and drove sharp bargains for their products. Many branches of this people were gradually becoming extinct from excessive use of alcohol. To-day they are said to be completely revolutionized. Instead of easy victims, they are becoming clever bargainers themselves, who know how to get full value for their furs and fish.

That drunkenness still exists and that many substitutes for vodka are employed cannot be denied. By comparison, however, the evasions of the prohibition degree are negligible. Cologne, cosmetics and even varnishes are submitted to processes whereby the alcohol in their composition is extracted for consumption. Illicit manufacturers are constantly hounded by the police so that the practice has failed to assume proportions.

The vacuum left in the lives of former vodka consumers is gradually being filled through the establishment in towns and rural districts of "marionette domes" (people's houses), where stereopticon and moving picture productions are becoming popular forms of amusement. Lecturers are also being sent out by associations which are working for the betterment of the people. The Duma has voted 1,000,000 rubles ($200,000) to promote temperance work by City Councils, the Church and other organizations. Card playing is reported to be on the increase. There has been much speculation as to whether the prohibition now in effect will be continued after the war. P. L. Bark, Minister of Finance, whose department of the Government was most seriously affected by the stoppage of revenue formerly derived from the sale of vodka, has definitely expressed himself in the affirmative. In a declaration in behalf of the Government which he made recently to critics of the Government's policies he said: "I find it important, categorically, to announce that all suspicions that the Government intends to renew the sale of vodka are unfounded. I categorically announce that the Government will support prohibition and that there will be no return to the former state of affairs. I can state with authority that the sale of vodka will be prohibited forever."

A measure is at present under consideration in the Duma to make the vodka prohibition perpetual.

Wages Paid in Penitentiary.

One thousand convicts in the Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia are to become employees in a knitting and hosiery plant that is soon to be installed inside the prison and will be enabled to earn an average of $2 per week in addition to other sources of income.

The knitting mill will be in operation in a few weeks. It is the outcome of the new law which creates the state prison commission. This is composed of the heads of the dozen penal and insane institutions in Pennsylvania. The commission has taken steps to create the plants which will give to the 3,000 inmates of prisons and reformatories an opportunity to work at something which will bring them compensation.

As a result of this meeting the Eastern Penitentiary will manufacture all hosiery, underwear and other knit goods that are used in the insane asylums and other state institutions. At present the state pays about $250,000 annually, to supply its wards with such goods.

The manufacture by the convicts of this output will bring to them directly in wages almost $100,000 a year, when the plant is in full operation. Even after they are compensated, the state will save a lot of money on the knitting mill investment, according to Prison Warden Robert J. McKenty, who speaks very favorably of the new enterprise.

The new law was created to provide work for every convict. Just now, not more than one-third of them are engaged in any occupation beyond the chores about the prisons. The new plant will keep them occupied and there will be paid to them ten to fifty cents per day, according to ability. Of this sum seventy-five per cent. will go to help support dependent members of their families. The other twenty-five per cent. goes to the prisoners themselves in the shape of a saving fund, which will be turned over to them when they are released.

Warden McKenty, in discussing the conditions at the big prison, said: "The moral status of the prisoners is raised through the occupation which allows them to earn some money and at the same time gives them an opportunity to work at something which will be of benefit to them when they leave the institution."

"Some years ago there was a strong prejudice against employing men just out of prison. That sentiment is rapidly disappearing. As a matter of fact, we can not supply the demand which is made on us for men who are about to be released. Just to-day a big steel mill asked me to send them 15 men, and I could only send them three. Some of the boys have learned to become expert landscape gardeners, and we are finding places for them almost every week. "As far as the knitting mills are concerned, the plant is just what has been needed to keep the men regularly and profitably occupied. So soon as the labor commission gets into good working shape, and the orders from the various state institutions come in for knit goods we will get busy. There are 22,000 people in these institutions who are dependent on the state for their clothing. These are the ones we will look after. Our goods will not reach the outside markets."

The other half will be given without the vestments and will feature more the interesting, cheery songs so dear to the American boy.

Hippocratic Face.
The hippocratic face is a condition of the human face produced by death, long illness, excessive hunger and the like. The nose is pinched, the temples hollow, the eyes sunken, the ears cold and retracted, the skin of the forehead dry, the complexion livid and the lips relaxed with cold. This appearance is so named from having been accurately described by Hippocrates, the father of medicine.

Horseshoeing in Chile.
Methods of horseshoeing in Chile are still primitive, the tools used being simple and few, consisting usually of a hammer, a rasp, a pair of pliers, a crude knife and an anvil. There is no need of fire, for the workman beats the shoe into shape cold.

R. R. and Mail Schedules Change.

The regular summer change in the schedule for the Western Maryland became effective last Sunday, June 18. The time of all trains except the Pittsburgh Flyer, arriving here at 5:30 a. m. for the East and at 11:25 p. m. for the West, has been changed. The train arriving here daily except Sunday at 8:31 a. m. under the old schedule for York and intermediate stations, will get here at 9:51 a. m. The train which leaves daily for Hagerstown, intermediate stations and the West at 10:16 a. m. will leave at 10:15 a. m. The 5:30 p. m. train has been changed to 6:53. This one runs daily except Sunday for Hagerstown and intermediate stations. The daily train east at 5:51 p. m. for Baltimore, York and intermediate stations is changed to 6:07. There is no connection for York on this train Sunday. The first city carrier delivery and collection will be started at 7:20 a. m. instead of 6:25, the second at 10:45 a. m. instead of 10:05; and the third at 2:20 p. m. instead of 2:15.

The rural carriers for the past six months have had to o'clock as their time for leaving the office. Their new time will be 10:30 so that they can take all the mail arriving in the morning.

Speed Rules Need Changing.

Three auto parties have been charged within the past week of violating speed regulations on the National Park avenues. Robert Lytle paid $11.25 for running his car 25 miles an hour, Charles Eichelberger paid $13.80 and Wm. Rosensteel $15.30 for running cars 20 miles an hour. The charges were admitted. The parties were strangers, the two last named from Maryland. In view of the fact that the law of Pennsylvania fixes the speed of autos as lawful at 25 miles an hour and where signs are placed, "Danger, run slow," 15 miles an hour, it would seem most advisable that the regulations on the battlefield avenues should conform to the speed regulations of the land in which the avenues are situated. While the government avenues are under the authority of the United States, yet it is confusing to the visitor to tour here over State roads where 25 miles an hour is lawful and go upon avenues where the speed must be cut down more than one half that rate.

Gettysburg wants the visitors, and it is to be regretted that any stranger should have to leave this place in haste, of not being allowed to do something the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania says is legal. Such impressions can do the town an injury as the stranger tells others of treatment received. It is to be noted that in the three violations complained of none exceeded the speed limit of the law of Pennsylvania.

It is respectfully submitted to the government authorities to change their speed regulations to conform to the laws of Pennsylvania, and where there are dangerous turns and corners to post there "Danger, run slow." Such a change would only be just to the town, and would avoid confusion to the stranger and injustices that could flow therefrom.

Rural Carriers' Meetings.

The York and Adams county rural letter carriers association will hold two special meetings this month, the first of which will be held at Gettysburg on Saturday evening, June 24, in the P. W. Stallsmith building, Centre Square. The other will be held in York on Saturday evening, July 1. These meetings have been called to discuss and take action on topics of timely interest to all carriers and it is extremely important that all Adams county carriers attend the Gettysburg meeting. It is rumored that the Post Office Department is devising additional ways and means of improving the efficiency of the rural service in both counties and to this end they invite the cooperation of local carriers. Patrons who have been inconvenienced through the discontinuance of routes and carriers who are burdened with excessive mileage will probably be relieved whenever advisable, which may result in the restoring or establishing of additional routes in this section. The local association enjoys the prestige of being the largest county association in the United States and has always maintained harmonious relations with the Post Office Department.

Not at War Yet.

The United States is not yet at war with the Mexican Government, though the clash at Carrizal has made the situation very serious. In the clash the Tenth U. S. Cavalry lost 12 dead, including their commander. The Mexican loss was 14 killed and 30 wounded. There has been no official report to either government as to the responsibility of the clash and until that appears no official action can be taken. From tone of communications from Carranza element it is said that it is likely the Mexico de facto government will disclaim responsibility for the affair.

Meanwhile the National Guard of Pennsylvania will be mobilized at Mt. Gretna by end of the week and the Guard of other States are being mobilized prepared for any emergency growing out of the situation.

Small Marine Camp.

According to latest advices it is expected that the U. S. Marine Corps camp will not come to Gettysburg until August 1st and will consist of not over 15 officers, instructors and enlisted men.

Gifts of the Grass.

The grass is mowed only by its sence. When we pass by a house which is minus a green lawn or grass, plot in front we exclaim, "What a blot on the landscape." In a vague way we realize that the grass gives tone and color to outdoor life as nothing else can; that no picture is complete without it. All the beauties of the seashore—the bold rocks, the crested surf, the dashing waves, the lights and shadows which play at sunrise and sunset beside old ocean—cannot compensate for the lack of the grass beneath our feet. Friends wintering at southern beaches have told us that they grew homesick for the grassy fields and meadows of home.—Margaret Woodward in Countryside Magazine.

Naming the Baby.

Give your baby a name that will suit him or her throughout life. Let it be a euphonious, well balanced name, indicative of intelligence, character and success and one so easily written or spoken that no nicknames will ever be found necessary. If there is available a family name with these good qualities, all the better. Do not indulge in levity. Do not give way to sentiment. Do not surrender to affection or romance in this matter of selecting a suitable name, and avoid novel combinations and plays upon words with out leading the child down with cheap commonplace.—Dallas News.

Different Matter.

"I'm trying to sell that house I bought last year. I thought it would be an easy matter, but it isn't." "What made you think it would be easy?" "Well, the agent didn't have any trouble—clinging to me."—Exchange.

Advice Concerning the Baby.

If the baby is pretty tell the mother that it is the very image of her; if it looks like something the cat dragged in intimate that it takes strongly after the old man.—Columbia State.

Thought works in silence: so does virtue. One might erect statues to silence.—Carlele.

Our Uneducated Graduates.

A great essential has been neglected in the education of the tens of thousands of young men and women who are graduating from the high schools and colleges of the country. They are presumed to have been fitted to meet the responsibilities and problems of life. In the majority of instances they have had mental but not physical education.

Some few have devoted themselves to a greater or less degree to competitive sports. This number is but a small fraction of those who pass through our schools. Our curriculums are often so planned that they make physical development difficult or impossible. To lay the foundation of health there should be proper physical training under the supervision of specially trained medical men beginning in the elementary school and going through the college course. A few years of training in youth and early manhood and womanhood would serve to instill habits of personal hygiene which would add inestimably to our future welfare, individually and as a Nation.

In every activity of life good health is a primary essential. No mental attainment can make up for a puny, illnourished, ill-developed body. Lack of well-developed physique almost invariably proves a handicap to achievement. Our present system has failed to bring about a balanced education of mind and body. Individual efficiency and preparedness for the uncertainties of life depend upon this.

To-day Sweden is leading the world in systematic education with a resulting high average of citizens individually prepared to take their part in the defense of their homes. Three thousand years ago the Greeks appreciated and practiced in the education of their youth this happy combination. It was this training that produced the scholars and heroes whose names live in the world's history.—Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M.D., LL.D., D.Sc., Commissioner of Health.

Wipe the BLUE out of MONDAY

Monday is a hard day. But not so hard that it should give you the blues. Neither should the end of the day find you nervous, done out, fit for nothing but bed.

It's not necessary—not if you'll replace your range with a New Perfection Oil Stove. For it's the range that's responsible for the fuss and the fume and for the terrible heat of the kitchen.

With a coal range there's no way out of keeping a roaring fire going the whole day long and just to heat a few boilers of water. But with a Perfection wash day is no longer a terror. The range is kept going as long as it is in actual use, your kitchen can't become unbearably warm, and you can be prepared for any usual.

New PERFECTION Oil Stove

without smoke or smell, without charring wicks, but with an intense heat. It never varies. Each gallon of Rayolight is precisely the same. And don't forget that the use of Rayolight for the life of any oil-burning device.

Dry Goods Department Store

Our advertising features generally the lines of goods pertaining to Wearing Apparel or Household Furnishings of which we carry, as you know, a very large stock both in yard goods and made up ready for use.

In this connection we wish to call attention to the opportunities we have—at this season of the year particularly—of getting "closing out lots" in various lines much under regular prices—even in this day of continued higher prices—and this opportunity we pass over to our customers on the same basis of lower cost to them.

We want this Ad to especially call attention to our unusual stock of Domestic Dry Goods and House and Bed Linens, Counterpanes, etc.—of which we carry immense lines all during the year.

Our buying prestige permits us to often give much lower prices and better values than can be obtained elsewhere. We ask you to use this great store for any line of goods you may need—with the utmost confidence that both the goods and the prices are absolutely right.

who know the business of the legislature. He told of his efforts to serve the farmers of his district and of successes along this line. Mr. Rudisill pledged in the event of his re-election to devote himself to the interests of the people and to serve them as faithfully as he had in the past.

At the conclusion of the speeches the Resolution Committee reported the following resolutions which were enthusiastically adopted, and committee then adjourned to meet at the call of the Chairman.

Resolutions.

1. The Democratic party prides itself and congratulates the country on having as the head of the Nation during this time of crisis and world's convulsion the greatest statesman, patriot and American, Woodrow Wilson. His wisdom, patience and unflinching fairness and neutrality has undoubtedly preserved peace within our borders and prevented our Nation from being drawn into the vortex of wars. He has maintained the dignity and honor of the United States, both at home and abroad, and cautious criticism, which does not point out methods by which other results could be secured, is ungenerous, unpatriotic and is prompted solely by a greedy desire to get at the "Flesh Pots of Egypt."
  2. During this time of national danger and probable complications it would be most unwise to change leaders and substitute an untried man in world's politics for our present competent and far-seeing President. It is always dangerous to swap horses in crossing a stream, and this Nation now is certainly passing through turbulent waters.
  3. The constructive legislation affecting business, child labor, farmers and working men passed by the last two Democratic Congresses far exceeds in importance and value that passed by any other two Congresses at any time or of any party. This good work can be continued and the hands of our President strengthened only by returning a Congress with a Democratic majority. During his two years of service as a member of Congress Hon. A. R. Brodbeck proved himself to be attentive to all duties of the office and a consistent and ardent supporter of Democratic policies and supporter of the President. He is now a candidate on our ticket for re-election and we pledge him an united Democratic support and ask for him the support of all progressive and patriotic citizens in the 20th Congressional District.
  4. Thomas J. Brereton, candidate for the office of State Senate, is, through his active connections with the people of this district, well acquainted with the conditions, interests and needs of all sections of our district. Mr. Brereton's unflinching loyalty to his business and political principles, as best known by the many people of our district with whom he is closely associated, eminently qualify him to be the representative of this district in the State Senate. The support of all whom believe in the efficiency of the honest and well informed business man as a legislator is earnestly asked. We commend the candidacy of Mr. Brereton to every voter as an honest, conscientious and intelligent man and one who is incapable of duplicity.
  5. Hon. D. Cahin Rudisill has proved himself to be a valuable and intelligent member of our State Legislature, having the courage of his convictions and supporting those measures which correspond with his political principles and well known attitude on current affairs. We consider that his re-election this fall would be in line with Democratic policies and result in good both to Adams county and to the Commonwealth, and we ask for his support the votes and influence of all who believe in the advancement of good government and the defeat of measures injurious to the State.

Europe's Battle Front Lessons

XII.—Better Keep Invader at Sea Than Fight In Trenches

To Keep Thousands of Americans From Being Killed on Land Our Great Need Is to Have Enough Ships to Cope With Any Enemy.

This Is Greatest of All Lessons Taught by Great Conflict, Says Frederick Palmer In Concluding His Series—Dreadnaughts Rule.

By FREDERICK PALMER, who has been only official representative of the entire American press with the allies. Copyright, 1915, by the Wheeler & Langdon Inc.

WE are least prepared in the very thing in which it should be most natural for us to be prepared for war. We are one of the great manufacturing nations of the world. No people surpasses us in mechanical genius, adaptability or industrial organization. Europe regularly sends representatives of its own industrial plants to study the methods of ours. Though we pay more for our labor than European countries, thanks to our standardization and our ability to make machinery do the work of men, we export automobiles and many other manufactured products to European countries. We do not take lessons in industrial organization; we give them. Yet if we were industrially organized for defense we should have gone a long way toward victory in case of war.

War is no longer fought with men, guns, rifles and money alone. Money of itself will not buy either trained men or industrial plants. Every resource, every ounce of energy behind the armies, must count.

Germany, the most thoroughly organized country in Europe in a governmental sense, not only prepared her guns and soldiers, but she prepared to back them up with her national resources. She had her industrial resources, as well as her military organization ready. We have some soldiers and some guns, but it has not yet occurred to us as a nation to co-ordinate our industrial resources so that they would be ready to resist any invasion.

British Had Reserve of Supplies. The British admiralty had more in mind than having all types of ships from destroyers to dreadnaughts, prepared to strike at an hour's notice. It had foreseen how national resources were to be used to back up the navy. A year's supply of coal was in reserve on the outbreak of the war. Ready food, were all other kinds of supplies which were the product of industrial organization, and the admiralty knew where to turn for more. In the immense merchant marine, in numerous shipbuilding plants, the British navy had resources at command to carry out a naval program in time of war. It did not wait until war came to know what resources it had. They were lined up before the war.

Every nation in Europe fully realizes our powerful industrial resources. Any one that considers attacking the United States will first ask whether it is co-ordinated for war. These European powers, not to mention any great oriental power, do not make war unless they think they are going to win.

Everything in the way of preparedness that we can do which does not take a single man out of civil life, but merely puts him into a system of industrial preparedness, means the saving of so much money. We make machinery take the place of men in our factories, and therefore we should at war. The lesson of this war is the value of machinery. Success has been with the armies which have had the most efficiently organized machinery at the rear no less than at the front.

Organize Before War. Before the war the great Krupp works in Germany and the Creusot works in France as well as the Armstrongs in England kept up their plants partly by immense orders from foreign nations. Germany encouraged the Krupps. This is hardly in keeping with our principle. The American people have a strong objection as a people, to going into the business of supplying arms for the killing of human beings. But we are preparing for any eventuality every day with our increasing output of arms and shells for sale to Europe. At the close of the war we shall have the plants to make both rifles and shells, but they will be private enterprises, not under government control. In any scheme of preparedness they should be our first asset. However, most of them are located in a section of our country most likely to suffer from an invasion. If taken by the enemy their product would be turned against us.

Prepared already with immense forces of artillery, with immense munition plants, in anticipation of war, with an industrial organization under government direction so complete that the majority of every plant and almost every workman was known, it was a matter of using a card index system for Germany to have a national organization immediately ready. England, too, months before she could organize the industrialism of peace for the purpose of war.

One of this organization could have been done before the war with almost no expense, and the nation at large would have been perfectly unconscious of this preparation which was secretly going on.

But our army staff is allowed no such authority. It is insufficient to undertake any such work. The first step is to increase its number and to give it authority.

Up to Dec. 1, vitally as the allies needed rifles for their new troops, the United States had been able to manufacture only 3,000 a week. It takes seven or eight months to make a rifle plant, and even in that time it is difficult to produce the skilled workmen requisite for rifle manufacture. We are getting both now and sending abroad big consignments. But that did no good to the allies during the Russian drive last summer or during the advance of the Germans in the Balkans. The Germans had their rifle plants ready.

Certainly the United States should have at least 1,000,000 rifles ready in case of war, for the vast size has been proved to be heavy in this war. They will cost nothing except their storage.

Arsenal Should Be Behind Rockies.

Our government might well buy some munition and rifle making machinery now and set it up somewhere at remote points from the coast in new ing without men. By men I do not refer to soldiers, but to the workman, or the superintendent of a factory, or the banker or business man. A man who is good at rifle making, a highly expert mechanic of any kind in metals, is more valuable on his own job in time of war than he is firing a rifle at the front. There are 100,000 men who can fire a rifle to one who knows how to make one. It would be nothing less than a crime to have any mechanic good at construction—the parts of planes or at assembling them shot at in the trenches. Both England and France had to send back from the front to the munition factories many expert mechanics, engineers and overseers.

Boy Scouts and Others Useful.

Here, again, if we gave our staff an opportunity, it would make a canvass of another kind of reserves than those who are to fill the ranks of fighting regiments. The nation has only to give the word and we shall have a set of officer experts in Washington who will go on quietly preparing all of our resources for war. In case of sudden war our bankers also should know what to do. The staff should take them into consultation too. Every single resource plays its part. Mobilize them all.

Every boy who goes to a military school, every volunteer company, every national guard or regiment, every scout, may be of use. Any kind of organization may help. The law scout in Europe has been of immense service as messengers. They run all the errands of the British war office and they were as fast in Brussels before it fell as they were on the German arsenals. That does not mean that we shall go on making rifles, only that the plants will require a caretaker. Against any attack on the Pacific coast of the United States, the place for an arsenal is in Idaho or in Arizona, behind the Rocky mountains. Your munition plants must be out of reach of the enemy in case of invasion. You can not imagine Germany building an Essen on the French side of the Rhine, but that is practically the location of our Springfield arsenals and most of our other arsenals.

While Jesse Birely, New Oxford, and a party of friends were driving along the highway near Gullen's Station on Saturday evening, one of the tires on the car burst causing the machine to zig-zag along the road for almost 300 feet, finally striking a telephone pole. MUNITION WORKS IN CONNECTICUT; OUR ARSENALS ARE ALL NEAR THE COAST—BOY SCOUTS USEFUL IN THIS WAR—TYPE OF RED CROSS AMBULANCE USED BY OUR ARMY.

In case of invasion by the Atlantic coast or by the Pacific coast we should have to make great concentrations of camps at certain points back from the coast. Have the sites of these camps been chosen? Has anything been done toward a paper organization which could be prepared in time of war in the prompt gathering of the material in the laying of railroad sidings and the organization of labor for the purpose? Not a board need be transported, not a nail driven, not a shovelful of earth be lifted, in order that the plans for the camps should be prepared before the war.

Auto Trucks and Ambulances Needed.

We shall need thousands upon thousands of automobile trucks for transport. From Europe we can learn the lessons of the organization of this transport, the value of standardized parts, the importance of having repair shops at the front and what should be the equipment of these shops.

We would need ambulances too. The European experience tells us which is the most practicable ambulance. An car can be turned into an ambulance in a very short time in either England, Germany or France now. If it should have to transform 1916 it, quicker we did it in case of war it better.

Our railroads would need special cars for the wounded. Under our present system these might be started by a thousand different local committees and the ambulances, too, but European experience has proved that these things are best done under government direction. Volunteer organizations are usually not given to co-operation.

Ready resources, however, are not side. British boy scouts in the company of old seamen keep watch along the British coast.

If we are going to defend the Monroe doctrine, then co-operation with all the South American and Central American republics is important. Absence of co-operation has been one of the weaknesses of the allies. If a landing were made on the shores of Mexico, then we should be ready with munitions and help for the Mexicans if it is our plan to defend Mexico. Should we lose command of the sea, how are we going to defend the Panama canal? It will be almost impossible to march troops overland. Here the government might co-operate with individual enterprise. We have no military railroads in the United States as they have in Russia or Germany. Co-operation with the Mexican railroads for the transport of troops would be the simplest kind of provision.

A Pan-American Railroad.

But why not the pan-American railroad which is to unite the American republics? Why not, though the seas should be closed to us, have a line of steel running to Panama itself? That would mean the supply and re-enforcement of our garrison there if necessary, and the certainty of this would practically insure our possession of the canal.

The same service that Germany has done for Turkey over the railroads of the Balkans we should be able to do for Mexico and Central America in time of war. With a railroad connection to Panama the canal would be safe, no matter if we were powerless command of the seas.

But the great thing is that we should have such a railroad, one that we could resort to in case of emergency. We would not be strong at heart if we were not able to put a much larger plan in the field as a first premise.

Once Europe knows that the resources of the United States have been co-ordinated under an army staff for immediate use in case of war we should have served notice to any enemy, which that enemy would understand well enough to think twice before attacking us.
